Dear Dr. Henney:

I sincerely urge you to ban all human antibiotics in animal feeds. One of the reasons I've become a vegetarian is because I no longer can trust the purity of our meat supply. Although human medicine is the major user of antibiotics (overly so, I might add), farmers actually use more than 40% of all antibiotics sold in this country. As head of our FDA don't you think your responsibility lies with the consumer and not with the farmer? PLEASE use your position and authority on behalf of American citizenry to ban antibiotics in animal food.

Thank you for your consideration.

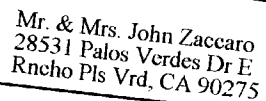

Sincerely,
